Introduction

- 1 The evidence is complex because it entails multiple disciplines such as: archeology, linguistics, art history, textual evidence (mostly oral), etc. Many scholars have provided arguments against the Aryan Invasion Theory on linguistic and archaeological grounds. Some have even proposed that the homeland of the Indo-European language family is India, a theory known as Out of India Theory.

1. Dismantling the United States of America

- 1 The authors are indebted to the following two books for providing important insights that have helped in this chapter: 1) (Pluckrose and Lindsay 2020); 2) (Boghossian and Lindsay 2019).
- 2 Gramsci introduced the concept of cultural hegemony in the Marxist framework. It refers to the dominance of a diverse society by the ruling class who manipulate the culture of that society—the beliefs and explanations, perceptions, values, and mores—so that the worldview of the ruling class becomes the accepted cultural norm. Thus, the socio-economic and political status quo are misrepresented as being natural, inevitable, and beneficial to all classes, rather than being contrived for the exclusive benefit to the ruling class.
- 3 Gramsci proposed a strategic distinction between two kinds of war. The war of position is an intellectual and cultural struggle to create a proletarian culture whose native value system counters the cultural hegemony of the bourgeoisie. Class distinctions are emphasized, changing the academic discourse and revolutionary organization. Then, in the war of manoeuvre, popular and political support are mobilized for social revolution.

- 9 A big difference between the postmodernist deconstruction and Vedanta or Buddhism is that Vedanta and Buddhism also deconstruct binaries, the ego, the ideas we have of truth which are based on our own ego and our own language, etc. The difference being that Vedanta has a deeper absolute reality after one has transcended the relative reality. So, the relative reality of Nama Rupa is false, but that doesn't mean there is nothing else of a higher level, whereas in the case of Postmodernism, there is no higher reality, there is no ultimate, absolute reality, and once you deconstruct the reality as constructed by human power and social discourse, there is no other higher reality which would be of a universal kind. One ends up with identities, with their own separate realities, fighting each other and replacing one set of hegemony with another hegemony.

She refers to pedophilia as one of these 'essentialized categories' and she adopts a position of moral relativism. She wants us to sympathize with pedophiles, writing: 'It is harder for most people to actually sympathize with boy-lovers. Like communists and homosexuals in the 1950s, boy-lovers are so stigmatized that it is difficult to find defenders for their civil liberties, let alone for their erotic orientation'. (Abelove, Barale and Halperin 1993, 147)

- 24 Dismantling Childhood Innocence: Julie C. Garlen explains: ‘...The construct of childhood innocence is a powerful social myth that structures children’s social relations and culture and informs their rights and status in society. ... By examining the emotional investments and social tensions that have shaped concepts of childhood, which define who is entitled to innocence and what it means to “belong” with/in childhood, I reveal how the doctrine of innocence has operated to maintain White supremacy’. She considers childhood innocence as something unnatural and blames White supremacy. This innocence is built by parents through ‘the magical childhood moments’ they want the child to remember forever, such as ‘bedtime songs and stories, lunch box love notes, kiss attacks, fort building, catching bugs and fireflies, bonfires, snowball fights, shoulder rides, gardening, cooking, organized adventures, and readily available art, music, and cultural experiences’. The parental goal is to implant memories of a happy childhood ‘filled with music, laughter, exploration and sun’. Vacations, she says, are ‘happiness anchors’ that will later ‘lighten the burdens of adulthood’. This parenting is fake, she maintains, because the goal is to ‘Curate extraordinary adult memories for their children by creating a mythical period of wide-eyed wonder and magical moments’. Parents protect their children from natural things like sadness and stress by censoring topics such as sexuality, death, violence, and poverty. They want to regulate ‘children’s sexual agency’ along with regulating race relations by producing a particular “childhood” that perpetuates White supremacy’. Garlen says that this amounts to the ‘Conflation of innocence with conservative Christian values’. She feels that toys, games, video games and TV shows that depict violence are considered threats to innocence because they are a direct assault on Christian values. Gender fluidity is a threat to the parents’ agenda to produce childhood innocence. The definition of innocence is incorrect as the need to protect children from adult knowledge of sexual desire, consumption, violence, and immorality. This presupposes that adult culture is corrupt and children need to be protected from it. Garlen challenges the adult-child binary. She explains the structural problem: ‘The prioritization of childhood innocence reinforced the superiority of White elites who would serve as the models of the new Christian piety and emphasized the role of women as the primary nurturers of good Christian children. At a time when the morality of human enslavement could no longer be justified, the doctrine of childhood innocence also offered a sort of absolution by proxy for White Americans.’ Her stated goal is to dismantle the traditional notions of innocence ‘to advance conditions of social justice’. She gives a specific example of White fragility: 'A cogent example of White Fragility occurred recently during a workplace anti-racism training I co-facilitated with an inter-racial team. One of the white participants left the session and went back to her desk, upset at receiving (what appeared to the training team as) sensitive and diplomatic feedback on how some of her statements had impacted several people of color in the room. At break, several other white participants approached us (the trainers) and reported that they had talked to the woman at her desk, and she was very upset that her statements had been challenged. They wanted to alert us to the fact that she literally "might be having a heart-attack." Upon questioning from us, they clarified that they meant this literally. These co-workers were sincere in their fear that the young woman might actually physically die as a result of the feedback. Of course, when news of the woman's potentially fatal condition reached the rest of the participant group, all attention was immediately focused back onto her and away from the impact she had had on the people of color'. - 21 (Levi 2002) When I first saw the PhD dissertation of Scott Levi being done at University of Wisconsin-Madison, I did not notice any mention about slavery in India before the Muslims. The dissertation was about slavery during Islam in India, and it was based on archives of that period available in the former USSR. But then a warning was issued by academic scholars that his work would play into the hands of “Hindu activists” like me. The published version was adapted with a preamble saying that slavery pre-dates Islam in India because it is mentioned in the Vedic literature. However, that claim is incorrect because it is based on mistranslating the Vedic Sanskrit term “dasu” as “slave”, which is an incorrect translation.

- 10 Unlike Britain, the mental and manual aspects of technical work are integrated in Germany, and students are expected to do intellectual, conceptual, abstract work along with physical tasks like carpentry and metal work. German engineering, in fact, prioritizes technique over theory. The engineer is first and foremost trained as a skilled technician.

- 34 Subramanian shows her true colors when she starts supporting the Kashmir separatists, Maqbool Bhatt and Afzal Guru, who were charged for the 2001 terrorist attack on the Indian Parliament. It is interesting that her criticism is echoed in the reports by the US Commission on International Religious Freedom labeling India as a Country of Concern because it allegedly suppresses religious freedom. Positioning herself with the USCIRF, she accuses Modi of violent attacks on Muslims and Dalits, the arrest of civil and human rights activists, and the killing of journalists. She does not believe that such things ever happened under previous governments. She also criticizes the Modi government for celebrating Sanskrit and establishing separate facilities for vegetarians and non-vegetarians, as though that is something contrary to lower caste interests.

- 29 Apasthambha dharmasutra may have supported untouchability, but it is rarely read by practicing Hindus. It seems to be read mainly by those looking for ways to attack Hinduism. Most Hindus have never heard of it. And many other better known dharmashastras differed, 'Badari espoused the cause of the shudras and propounded the view that all (including shudras) were entitled to perform Vedic sacrifices.' See: 'History of Dharmashastra (Ancient and Medieval Religions and Civil Law in India). Volumes I-V'. Bhandarkar Oriental Research Institute, Pune. Retrieved on February 15, 2022 (https://indianculture.gov.in/indian-culture-repository?search\_api\_fulltext=History%20of%20Dharmasastra&f%5B0%5D=parent\_library\_ic\_repository%3AArchaeological%20Survey%20of%20India). And Ambedkar mentions that though the Dharmashastras says in one place that a Shudra is not entitled to upanayana, the text Samskara Ganapti explicitly declares Shudras to be eligible for it. He also shows that Jaimini, the author of Purva Mimamsa, said that Shudras could perform Vedic rites. Ambedkar cites Bharadwaja Srauta Sutra (v. 28) and Katyayana Srauta Sutra (1 & 5) to show the eligibility of shudras to perform Vedic rites. See: 'Shudras and the Counter Revolution' in (Ambedkar, Writings and Speeches. Vol. 3 1989a, 423)

- 40 (Kane 1941, 170)

- 41 (Kane 1941, 168)
- 42 (Kane 1941, 173-76). Similarly, the Smṛtyarthasara states that no problem occurs upon physical contact on public roads leading to a market, in religious processions, in temples, during festivals, in sacrifices, at sacred places, in calamities or invasions of the country, on the banks of large sheets of water, in the presence of great persons, or when there is a fire or other calamity.
- 43 Also, Apastambha Dharmasutra says that Shudras may cook food for the masters of the higher castes. (Datta 1944, 27)
- 44 (R. N. Sharma 1977, 55)
- 45 Rig Veda (X.45.6). These included four from each varna and a fifth who was outside the varnas, i.e., a Dalit. Yaska in his Nirukta (VI.7) says this. See (Mookerji 1969, 52).
- 46 (R. S. Sharma 1958, 63)
- 47 (R. S. Sharma 1958, 68)
- 48 (McClish and Olivelle 2012, lxiv)
- 49 (Datta 1944, 30)
- 50 For instance, the Baijavapa Grhya Sutra says that seven samskaras are allowed to the Shudra from garbhadhana to caula. The view of lawgiver Apararka appears to be that the eight samskaras from garbhadhana to caula were meant for all the varnas, including the Shudras. According to the Madanaratna, Rupanarayana and the bhashya of Harihara as quoted in the Nirnayasindhu, the Shudras were entitled to perform six samskaras and the five daily mahayajnas. - 52 For example: In the Sigala Jataka, Buddha denounces a man from a low varna for wanting the hand of a Kshatriya girl. In the Simhakotthuka Jataka, a monk of inferior birth wants to recite the religious texts monks born in higher varnas were reciting, but Buddha rebukes him saying that the monks born in superior varnas were like lions while he was like the offspring of a jackal. He is likened with the ass who wants to acquire the status of a lion by wearing the lion-skin. (Goyal 1987, 283)
- Also, in the Kannakathalasutta Buddha says, 'There are these four varnas – Kshatriyas, Brahmins, Vaishyas and Shudras, of these four varnas, two – the Kshatriyas and the Brahmins are given precedence in salutation, homage and obeisance'. (Datta 1944, 177)
- 53 (Goyal 1987, 285)
- 54 For example: Buddhist masters like Sariputra, Maudgalyayana, and Mahakashyap were all Brahmins. In the later Buddhist order, the intellectual stalwarts in philosophy, logic, ethics, poetry and drama were almost entirely from the Brahmin varna. Buddhist exemplars like Ashvaghosha, Nagarjuna, Aryadeva, Asanga, Vasubandhu, Dignaga, Dharmakirti, and Dharmottara were born in Brahmin families, educated in Vedic lore, and reared in the orthodox Vedic tradition. They were intellectual giants that produced erudite works on dialectics and logic that established many of the core tenets of Buddhist philosophy. (Goyal 1987, 271-72)

The Ramoshis secured the hill forts while the Mahars and Mangs served in artillery and the garrisons. (Cadell 1938, 12) They were also intelligence agents, carrying out surveillance and misleading enemies. (Betham 1908, 141)

- 84 For example, Subedar Gopal Baba Valangkar (nineteenth Bombay Infantry), the Mahar leader in Dapoli in the late 1880s and a colleague of the social activist, Jyotirao Phule, called the Mahars 'polluted Kshatriyas'. (Constable 2001, 446-47)

- 87 The Jatav community of Uttar Pradesh refuse to be referred to as Chamars. According to Lomash Ramayana, which is found in Nepal, the Jatavs trace their ancestry to a direct lineage from Lord Shiva. In Jatav Jiwan (1924) and Yaduvansh ka Itihas (1942), the Jatavs are mentioned as a Kshatriya jati. The Dabgar (often considered Chamars), is a Dalit community spread across Gujarat, Madhya Pradesh, and Rajasthan. Their oral tradition traces their origin to Rajputs who were downgraded because they worked with the skins of dead animals. The Meghwal Scheduled Caste community is divided into several exogamous communities like Chauhan, Parmar, Solanki etc. Many of these names are of Rajput origin. The Chamars of Madhopur (in Uttar Pradesh) also consider themselves degraded Kshatriyas (K. Singh 1993, 326, 387, 939, 304).

- 89 (Constable 2001, 448-49)
- 90 Some chapters of the Yajur Veda are entirely devoted to enumeration of various industries that belonged to them. For example: Yajur Veda 30.15 mentions leather workers (Charmakar or present day Chamars), Yajur Veda 16.27 and 30.7 mention textile workers (Julahas), Yajur Veda 16.27 and 30.7 mention iron workers (Lohars or ironsmiths), Yajur Veda 16.27 and 30.6 mention Rathakar or the maker of chariots, Yajur Veda 16.46 and 30.6 mention the makers of bows and arrows, Yajur Veda 30.8 mentions the maker of nails and needles, Yajur Veda 30.12 mentions the sculptors or the maker of idols (Mahavir 2001, 116). Also, the Atharva Veda mentions that the craftsmen had very large residences and factories (See Atharva Veda 7.73.1. Also see (Mahavir 2001, 113).
- 91 (Mahavir 2001, 228)
- 92 (Mahavir 2001, 114)
- 93 For example, See Rig Veda 1.31.8, 1.31.9 and 8.46.3. Also See Pg. 112, Vaidik Arthvyavastha, Dr. Mahavir, Samaanantar Prakashan, New Delhi, 2001. Vedic mantras mention Shudra artisans who made iron weapons for the king in their factories and in return the king protected them, an indication of their cohesive and symbiotic relationship. (See Rig Veda 10.92.7 and Rig Veda 10.48.3.) The role of Shudras as engineers and architects continued in the later periods. During the Mauryan period, the area to the west of the royal palace was allotted to them for making woolen and cotton goods and armor (Sastri 1987, 79). A Shudra artisan community of the Andhra region that claimed to have originated from Vishvakarma (considered the divine architect in Hinduism) helped in the construction and repair of temples, chariots, temple ornaments, religious vessels, and images. The Vijayanagar kings (fourteenth-seventeenth century) gave them certain temple honors and privileges, such as walking in front of chariots and offering puja standing on the chariots in their traditional dress. Also, in the Andhra region, the Kancharas or brass-workers were Shudras, and an inscription of 1645 CE says that the ruler waived all their taxes and tolls because of their importance. The Uppara Shudra community provided civil engineering to dig wells and construct houses. They were also involved in removing silt from rivers to make them viable for shipping. Another Shudra community were the Kammaras who manufactured tools, implements and wares of iron (Pandey 2015, Chapter 2).

- 94 For instance, in the Andhra region in the seventeenth-eighteenth century, several Brahmins and Kshatriyas worked under the Shudra chief of the village (Pandey 2015, Chapter 2).
- 95 (Kunhappa 1988, 2)
- 96 (Menon 2011, 133). Interestingly, in the Mahabharata, the twin Ashvins, physicians to the gods, are Shudras (R. S. Sharma 1958, 74).
- 97 (Datta 1944, 25)
- 98 The Indore copper-plate inscription (465-466 CE) of the Gupta emperor Skandagupta records an endowment that was made, and the interest was allocated to maintain the lamp in the temple of the Sun. The endowment was deposited with the guild of oilmen of Indrapura who invested it in their own business or lent it to others to gain interest. An inscription at Nashik from third century CE during the rule of King Isvarasena records the investment of an endowment with the guilds of potters, oil-millers, and others. An inscription from Junar (c. 1165 CE) records an investment with the guilds of bamboo-workers and braziers (Chakraborti 1960, 316-18). While some twelfth century records mention that Shudras traded in commodities prohibited for the Vaishyas, like salt, wine, curd, arms, poison, and so forth, the Brihaspati Smriti say that Shudras traded in all commodities. Also, Kuvalayamala, a Jain text from the eighth century CE, mentions Shudras being leaders of trade caravans. (S. Srivastava 2008, 51).
- 99 (S. Srivastava 2008, 53)
- 100 (Datta 1944, 27)
- 101 (Datta 1944, 148)
- 102 (Chakraborti 1960, 326)
- 103 For example, during the Maurya period such guilds were granted various concessions by the state. In the Andhra-Kushan period (c. 200-300 CE) and in the period of the Andhravriyas there were guilds of weavers, druggists, corn-dealers, oil manufacturers, etc. In the Gupta period (c. 320-500 CE) there were guilds of oilmen, silk weavers, and architects (Datta 1944, 147-48). An inscription of Emperor Vikramaditya II (c. 733-44 CE) in Karnataka shows that the state authorized the guild of brass-workers to collect taxes from the public (Chakraborti 1960, 318). The Siyadoni inscription (903 CE) of the Pratihara emperor, Mahendrapala I mentions guilds of potters, distillers of liquors, sugar-boilers, betel sellers, oil-makers, and stone cutters. Such guilds facilitated the task of the government and rendered useful service in organising society and administering justice in internal affairs (Tripathi 1989, 345-46).

- 104 The existence of wealthy Shudras is mentioned in the Krishna Yajur Veda and Sama Veda. The Alinachitta Jataka mentions a prosperous guild of weavers near Benaras. The Buddhist Jataka stories tell us that blacksmiths intermarried with rich jewellers. See (Datta 1944, 29) and (Chakraborti 1960, 314, 319).
- 106 For example, the Mathura inscriptions of the Kushana period (first century CE) record the names of many prosperous Shudra donors who were blacksmiths, barbers, washermen, and so on. They donated money for building temples, roads, and other public amenities. A blacksmith named Gova, son of Siha is also heard of in the inscription to have dedicated an image of Sarasvati. Similarly, a blacksmith Nada of Kalyana is recorded to have given money to build a road in the Kanheri inscription. One inscription belonging to the Kushana period (first century CE) mentions the term 'Rajanapita' which means chief of barber's guild. The Mathura inscription of the Kushana period records the name of a donor called 'Rayagini' which means the wife of a dyer or a washerman. The Jatakas also mention about the guilds of dyers or washermen (dhobi). The Taxila casket inscription of Emperor Kanishka (first-second century CE) mentions a religious gift by an architect. Many records of the period mention a craft-guild of the navakarmikas (architects) who built universities and temples, and also did repairs. The Mandasar inscription of (c. 437-38 CE) of Gupta emperors speaks of a guild that built 'a noble and unequalled temple of the bright-eyed sun with the stores of wealth acquired by the craft'. The artisans in the Gupta period were held in high esteem by the kings as shown by the Karitalai (c. 493-4 CE) and the Khoh (c. 497-512 CE) inscriptions. Inscriptions of Gurjara Pratihara (mid eighth to eleventh century) rulers of north India also show that persons following the same occupation normally formed themselves into organizations for regulating their business (Chakraborti 1960, 318-25).
- 107 They mention wealthy Shudra fishermen in India who hired many laborers to fish in the rivers. In another example, a Shudra is named as the owner of five hundred sheds for manufacturing earthenware, clearly a sign of flourishing entrepreneurs. Another Shudra woman is named as an affluent owner of a pottery business, and Jain monks frequently took shelter in such pottery shops and held them in high esteem. The Jain texts describe many prosperous towns with fine buildings, temples, gardens, roads, etc., where Shudra craftsmen resided and worked. They also point out that the leather industry was thriving and Shudra communities manufactured shoes, bags, musical instruments like drums, bellowing bags, sheaths, etc. (Jain 1980, 29, 56, 58)
- 108 (S. Srivastava 2008, 51)
- 109 (Basham 2004, 146)
- 110 (Basham 2004, 146). For instance, during the British period, the plan to set up a seminary in 1821 failed because the Shudra students refused to be seated with the Shanars and Paraiyahs whom they considered lower to them. This was to be a boarding school, and the different castes were expected to dine together. For the Shudra students, this was an emotionally charged situation. As a result, parents withdrew their children. (Tschurenev 2019, 304)

The Virasaivas who have the knowledge of the Vedas and Agamas and their inner spiritual meanings; who are fired with the desire to attain moksha; who are followers of the Vedic path; and who are strict in following the tenets of pure Saivism'. (C. H. Rao 1936, 24) Rupa Gosvami, a great Vaishnava scholar of the sixteenth century CE, also made the same point in his Bhaktirasamrta-sindhu, a massive treatise on bhakti-rasa. He said that devotion to the Lord must be in accordance with the scriptures, shruti and smriti. (Haberman 2003, 41)

184 There are many instances showing that endogamy was not rigidly followed. Many of the great rishis mentioned in the Puranas and Mahabharata had mothers who were Shudras, such as Parashara Muni, known as the author of the Vishnu Purana, who was born of a shvapaaka (literally one who cooks the flesh of dogs) woman. (R. S. Sharma 1958, 63) The Dharmashastras discuss the instance when a Brahmin has a Shudra son and advocate that if the father is Brahmin, Kshatriya, or Vaishya, the son should inherit half the property. (R. S. Sharma 1958, 247) This shows that such cases were sufficiently common. During the Gupta period too, there are records mentioning marriages between people of different varnas. Buddhist texts also bear testimony to inter-marriages between persons of different varnas. For example, the Matanga Jataka mentions a merchant's daughter who became the wife of a chandala. - 29 Whitehead's tenure at Harvard (1924-37) was overlapped by the presence in the philosophy department of a number of professional philosophers such as William Earnest Hockings who were involved to some extent in Indic philosophy, having inherited the legacy of an earlier generation of Harvard philosophers such as William James, C.S. Peirce, George Santayana, whose philosophies were extensively influenced by Indic thought. During Whitehead's time at Harvard the Department of Sanskrit and Indian Studies flourished as did Buddhist Studies. As in the two previous decades, a fairly close relationship prevailed between Indic studies in general and Buddhist studies in particular and the philosophy department. Hockings is a prime example in this respect. In an essay on his personal recollection of Whitehead, Whitehead as I knew Him (Hocking 1963), Hocking fondly recalls Whitehead's tenure at Harvard and how he was a member of the Josiah Royce philosophy club, the members of which had included William James and those others at Harvard with interest in Indic thought. In another essay in the same volume ("Whitehead's Novel Intuition", pp.18-26), Charles Hartshorne, a student of Whitehead destined to become a prominent philosopher and theologian takes note of the resemblance of Whitehead's Process Philosophy to Buddhism, drawing particular attention to Whitehead's concept of Prehension (pp.2-26). As we have argued above, Whitehead's theory of prehension was likely developed on the basis of the Buddhist Abhidharma concept of Prapti (refer to table above (third item from bottom). Hartshorne himself embraced both Process Philosophy (of which he became the foremost theorist post-Whitehead and Buddhism) and called the philosophy of becoming or Process Philosophy 'the Buddhisto-Whiteheadian doctrine', thus indirectly confirming the Buddhist antecedence of Whitehead's Process Philosophy.

- 30 God in either Primordial Nature or Consequent Nature is a curious superimposition on a self-organizing universe in radical flux. For many Buddhists as well as other scientists, the curious blend of science and theology, especially evolutionary theory imposed on an incompatible Christian theological framework is highly problematic. For a trenchant critique of the attempts of Christian theologians to impose evolution on an incompatible Christian theological framework, see (Dharmasiri 1988)

- 6 Another related frame of reference on India has been the colonial theory of foreign Aryans dominating the native Dravidians. As discussed in Chapter 3, this has been further developed at Harvard into a three-tier model: The Munda language speakers are considered the original natives of India (now championed as ‘tribals’ or ‘Adivasis’ or Dalits). Above them are the Dravidians who came from the Middle East to build the Indus Valley Civilization, and they oppressed the Mundas. At the top are the Aryans who came from Central Asia and oppressed both the layers above.

- 106 The report states: 'This paper examines the hypothesis that the persistence of low spatial and marital mobility in rural India, despite increased growth rates and rising inequality in recent years, is due to the existence of sub-caste networks that provide mutual insurance to their members. Unique panel data providing information on caste loans and sub-caste identification are used to show that households that out-marry or migrate lose the services of these networks, which dampens mobility when alternative sources of insurance or finance of comparable quality are unavailable. At the aggregate level, the networks appear to have coped successfully with the rising inequality within sub-castes that accompanied the Green Revolution. Indeed, this increase in inequality lowered overall mobility, which was low to begin with, even further. The results suggest that caste networks will continue to smooth consumption in rural India for the foreseeable future, as they have for centuries.' See: (Munshi and Rosenzweig 2005).

- 107 The report states: 'Sustained high economic growth since the early 1990s has brought significant change to the lives of Indian women, and yet female labor force participation has stagnated at under 30%, and recent labor surveys even suggest some decline since 2005. Using a nationally representative household survey, we lay out five descriptive facts about female labor force participation in India that help identify constraints to higher participation. First, there is significant demand for jobs by women currently not in the labor force. Second, willing female non-workers have difficulty matching to jobs. Third, obtaining vocational training is correlated with a higher likelihood of working among women. Fourth, women are more likely to be working in sectors where the gender wage gap and unexplained wage gap, commonly attributed to discrimination, is higher. Finally, female-friendly policies, including quotas, are correlated with higher female participation in some key sectors. Combining these facts with a review of the literature, we map out important areas for future investigation and highlight how policies such as employment quotas and government initiatives focused on skilling and manufacturing should be better investigated and leveraged to increase women's economic activity.' (Fletcher, Pande and Moore 2017)
- 108 The report says: 'Female labor force participation varies significantly even among countries with similar levels of economic development. Recent studies have shown that gender norms can help explain these differences in women's work, but the channels through which norms impact women's employment decisions are not well understood. We present novel data on spouses' preferences and perceptions of community attitudes about female labor in rural India and document associations with female work. We find that the perceived social cost of women's work falls on men and that husbands' opposition to female labor is associated with their wives' lower take-up of employment.' (Bernhardt, et al. 2018)
- 109 The report states: 'We exploit random assignment of gender quotas across Indian village councils to investigate whether having a female chief councillor affects public opinion towards female leaders. Villagers who have never been required to have a female leader prefer male leaders and perceive hypothetical female leaders as less effective than their male counterparts, when stated performance is identical.

- Exposure to a female leader does not alter villagers' taste preference for male leaders. However, it weakens stereotypes about gender roles in the public and domestic spheres and eliminates the negative bias in how female leaders' effectiveness is perceived among male villagers. Female villagers exhibit less prior bias but are also less likely to know about or participate in local politics; as a result, their attitudes are largely unaffected. Consistent with our experimental findings, villagers rate their women leaders as less effective when exposed to them for the first, but not second, time. These changes in attitude are electorally meaningful: after 10 years of the quota policy, women are more likely to stand for and win free seats in villages that have been continuously required to have a female chief councillor.' from other spaces or institutions that we may consider as patriarchal. Ashoka did everything in its capacity to protect the perpetrator. One may think a university

She is working on a 'big project which is about looking at why women's participation in the labour force in India is so persistently low. What are the issues around that and that's been a big policy question right now. And so there we find that the fact that women have to do domestic chores I don't mean things like cooking cleaning etc. but even things like maintenance, household maintenance, washing clothes etc., with every additional domestic chore, when you account for all other factors, women's participation in economic activity goes down. That's one thing that we find and the other thing that we find is that while education of women has been rising, availability of suitable jobs is not. What I'm hoping is that this evidence based research contributes to the formulation of meaningful policy to tackle these persistent problems that we see'.

- 61 (Harvard University 2018j, 9). 'First is the role of technical education in caste formation. Rather than a space of universal knowledge where caste is no longer relevant, what we are seeing is the reconstitution of caste within and through the technical sciences. What this suggests is that caste is both resilient within and foundational to the makeup of the most modern, apparently identity-free institutions. Second is how we understand the relationship between meritocracy and democracy. By bracketing out historically accumulated advantages and disadvantages, the notion of meritocracy, like that of a color-blind society, has come to service the reproduction of inequality. Of course, the ideal meaning of meritocracy as a system which corrects for historical privilege has not vanished. However, the divergence between its ideal meaning and its social life should call into question the easy assumption that meritocracy is indeed a leveller of opportunity'.

21. Godrej and Queering

- 1 A 2011 study by the UCLA Williams Institute estimated the size of the LGBTQ+ population in the US and four other countries. The study found 3.5% identified as LGBTQ+ and 0.3% identified as transgender and 8.2% of Americans reported that they engaged in same-sex sexual behaviour. See: (Gates 2011). In 2020, that number increased: 4.5 % of the US population was found to be LGBTQ+ by the same research group. See: (Conron and Goldberg 2020)
- 2 Some of the main categories as of today are: Agender: does not identify with any gender; Bigender: identifies as two genders, either simultaneously or at different times; Cis-gender, cisgender: identifies as the same gender as the biological sex assigned at birth; Genderfluid: has a shifting or changing gender identity or identifies differently at different times; Genderqueer: has gender identity different from the societal norms of their assigned biological sex; Neutrois: neutral gender;

Trans, transgender, trans-man, trans-woman: identifies with a different gender than the sex assigned at birth. Sometimes trans people identify as either MTF (male to female) or FTM (female to male). A trans man is a person who was assigned female at birth and identifies as male. A trans woman is a person who was assigned male at birth and identifies as female. See: (Evan 2015)

22. Omidyar Network, Trojan Horse in India

- 1 See: (A. Field 2019)
- 2 See: (Fuller 2021). We are indebted to Fuller's investigative work that enabled us to dig deeper.
- 3 See: (Fuller 2021)
- 4 Fuller's investigation reveals the following: 'Omidyar, whose Omidyar Network funds AELP, also funds the Democracy Fund which is now part of Omidyar Group (1). The Democracy Fund, in turn, together with the Knight Foundation, Quadrivium, the McArthur Foundation and Luminate (also funded by Omidyar) fund Democracy Works (2). Omidyar also funds Democracy Fund Voice, which in turn contributes to Defending Democracy Together (3). Then there is Healthy Democracy which is funded by the Democracy Fund, Silicon Valley Community Foundation (which also receives money from Democracy Fund) (4) and the Ford Family Foundation. The Omidyar Network also co-funds New Public by Civic Signals, along with the Knight Foundation, One Project, the National Conference on Citizenship and the University of Texas at Austin, Centre for Media Engagement. Of course, the University of Texas at Austin, Centre for Media Engagement is also funded by the Omidyar Network, the Democracy Fund (funded by Omidyar), the Knight Foundation, Robert McCormick Foundation, and Google. To name just a few others, the Ada Lovelace Institute also receives funding from Luminate, the Wellcome Trust and Nuffield Foundation, while TicTec, a MySociety event about 'civic tech', is funded by Facebook, Luminate and Google, among others'.

- 7 There is also a direct flow to Equality Labs. Equity Initiative Omidyar's website states: 'Equality Labs is a critical conduit for information, services, and rapid response for South Asian and broader racial justice communities. With a grant from the Omidyar Network, we will increase direct services to our base and update our mutual aid resource kit, grow our COVID-19 public health guide and create more culturally sensitive materials; and bring on a new digital security contractor'. # Acknowledgments

A book of this magnitude and scope can only be developed with the help of a competent team. The authors wish to acknowledge the assistance given by several individuals working in a variety of specific capacities. T.N. Sudarshan has helped in the huge research that was required to put together a book of this magnitude. Sejuti Banerjea edited each chapter in parallel as we were writing, as well as the entire manuscript at the end, to help improve the flow, consistency, and clarity. Anurag Sharma and Divya Sharma improved the diagrams significantly. Anurag also provided extensive research support for Chapter 6. Subhodeep Mukhopadhyay built the bibliography very systematically in the standard format. Divya Reddy has helped with the transcription of audio files and videos that were used in the compilation of the text of this book. Gerald Surya led the effort to verify the quotations and find alternative urls where the original urls were dead. Aditya Pai downloaded all the references and organized them into an archive for future research, besides helping verify the quotations. Sanjana Roy Choudhury, our highly experienced editor, painstakingly went through the manuscript multiple times to ensure that the use of language and special terms are correct and consistent. Biswajit Malakar has been responsible for the book's website as well as all the video production related to the book's launch and marketing. Aditi Banerjee reviewed several chapters and provided helpful comments and feedback. Deepthi Rao reviewed the sections pertaining to the LGBTQ+ topics, and her extensive feedback is quoted in the Introduction. Rajeev Rao provided much of the early leads on Equality Labs. Prateek Uniyal helped transcribe some of the dictations by the authors. Manogna Sastry coordinated and oversaw the successful publication of the book.
